Monticello— From her first tepid impression of James Madison to her heroic saving of the George Washington portrait, Dolley Madison was always a personality to be reckoned with in government officials' circles.

Jessica Michna as Dolley Madison

Though her low-cut bodices may have shaken some visitors to the President's House, Madison himself approved of her style, so she said.

Mrs. Madison became quite the hostess at national and international gatherings during the early-1800s, and shared her hostess tips with those attending the MAHS annual dinner meeting May 26 at Zwingli UCC Fellowship Hall in Monticello.

Portraying Dolley Madison, "The Lady Who Saved Washington," Jessica Michna, both entertained and educated the audience throughout her performance. Dolley is just one of Michna's repertoire of characters, which include other First Ladies, historical women and fictional characters. Her company First Impressions is in Racine.

Recognition and Thank You's

Board members Michael Wayland and Don Schneider fulfilled their terms and did not seek re-election. Their contributions to the board and to the Society have been greatly appreciated.

Donna Ferguson stepped down as Director of Programs, after many years of scheduling fine, quality programming and speakers for our membership meetings. Paul Rieder has volunteered to fill the position.

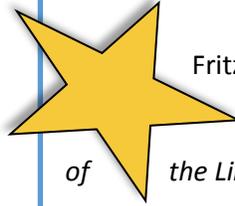

Jules Cappelle has been graciously sponsoring our website since its inception. MAHS is indebted to his contribution, which opens Monticello history to the world.

MAHS Volunteers recorded 407 hours of labor during the 2014-2015 fiscal year, which included hosting 410 visitors to the museum. We suspect many more hours went undocumented. Recorded volunteer hours are reported to the state board.

The 2016 MAHS annual meeting included the treasurer's report and secretary report, both of which passed by unanimous vote.

The 2015 rummage sale brought in $870. The society completed two museum property projects: installing the back patio and retaining wall and repairing the south building wall, at a total cost of about $8,200.

A humidifier was purchased to remove some of the dampness in the museum basement and arrangements were made to install it.

Liability insurance has been purchased to cover board members.

New and returning members elected to the Executive Board were John Casey, Teresa Dunlap and Sue Rieder.

The annual meeting dinner was prepared by Gempeler's Supermarket and MAHS President Mary Davis.

Generous portions of marble cake and ice cream top off the 2016 MAHS dinner.

Over 100 served ...

MAHS Secretary Karen Brugger and President Mary Davis (far right), build root beer floats for young visitors to the Woelffer Drug Store Museum May 21, during Monticello's Spring Fling Festival. Monticello Area Historical Society sold the floats and popcorn at yesteryear prices of 25 cents to encourage festival goers to stop in and tour the museum, which is celebrating its 15th year. Ruth Knight Sybers donated the building on N. Main Street to the society in 2001.
